TSP's Facebook Page is Getting Likes

Published February 21, 2017

Do you like the TSP? Like it on Facebook, that is? 69,575 individuals follow on Facebook; most of them are current or retired federal employees finelular my friend and former OPM staffer Gary Koca, and the ad Kalani Walther). There are some good things about the T in the upcoming paragraphs.

First, the TSP doesn't go crazy posting items. I might week; that's managcable. You won't say "Here they go a something.

Second, the posts don't make you angry or insult you.

I am of never-ending political screeds showing up on you see pictures of my grandchildren doing something cute, frolicking puppies, or helpful information. I even like posts that have recipes.

Third, the TSP does post the aforementioned helpful information. so look elsewhere for pupples and my grandchildren. As an example, they informed me on January 3rd that they would be mailing out Forms 1099 before the end of the month, hurry to file my taxes, I could access my 1099 on the website. They could be mail to know any more about the in tooting their own hom and public relations. This isn't a bad a lot to toot their horn about. On Groundhog Day, they had a gencouraging us to leave our money in the TSP when we separate, roundhog in the cartoon did not see its shadow.

oney in the TSP is a constant message from the Thrift Board. There as of doing so. The TSP's low expenses are perhaps the biggest pro, we withdrawal options are the biggest con.

There's no reason not to like the TSP, both as a great retirement savings plan and on Facebook. Consider following them.

You've changed over the years. So has the TSP. Few people know that better than Sharon, who's been with the plan since day one! She encourages everyone to get to know the TSP and #SaveltForward. How would you encourage someone to #SaveltForward? tsp.gov/thirty/#sharon
